Professional Career

I was articled in a small practice in Maidenhead before taking a semi-senior audit role with Kidsons Impey in 1987.

In 1990 I joined Cansdale & Co specialising in taxation of Lloyds' names.

I moved into a commercial role as a company accountant in 1994 for a data replication company and followed this with a position as financial controller for a kitchen distribution company near Milton Keynes.

In 2009 I became the financial controller for the private companies of the chairman of Aston Martin and worked on various financial projects in his sports automotive companies.

From 2010 onwards I have specialised in forensic accountancy, initially in the international construction claims sector, with assignments in Eastern Europe (Railway), Abu Dhabi (Sulphur Plant) and St Petersburg (Pulkova airport).

My claims experience including the calculation of consequential losses led me to Frenkels in 2014 where I managed most of the Interest Rate Swap mis-selling cases. Most recently I have been involved at Frenkels in managing cases for commercial disputes, criminal defence and POCA.
